Sillcock key: tools for urban survival

Gear

One piece of equipment I always carry with me is this water key, it can be found in almost any hardware store for under 20$. This key opens the water spigots on buildings around your city in case you really need water and are not able to afford buying water t all the time, also can fill up a bucket to do laundry.

The kea to the city! This thing, a good hat and a microfiber hand towel, turn a long hot walk into a treasure hunt for your next personal splashpad!

Please please please turn the water off when you are finished with it.

Our Phoenix building, ultimate we had to remove the spigots, too many instances where it was just left running overnight.

This was an evolution, had normal spigots, no key needed. After a couple overnight instances where one was just left open, we installed the key style. And had a couple rounds of theft, stolen water spigots.

We're relatively vagabond friendly, though I'm afraid I've spooked a few people in the past, entering the rear of the building, then opening the front to the surprise of a sleeper. It's not a problem, just be gone before 7 or 8 in the morning, all good. Same with the popular back parking lot, fair game at night, be gone before the business opens.

Yeah I love to find places which don't care as long as you don't make a mess.... And if there's plug ins then I'll live there a year lol

Make sure you turn off the spout on outdoor spigots. If they have not been used for a while they need to be worked on and off a bit to close.

No need for the triangular shaped one yet? Wondering if I should get that one instead.
